I am going to collaborate with colleges at the school where I am based. Although I teach profoundly disabled students that will benefit from my knowledge of climate change through adaptations that I will make and encourage others in conservation efforts. I plan to pass along to them websites and information about the digital library, the oral history, the geological information, and the psychology of hopefulness to teachers that teach regular ed. students. My school has a program that teaches students that are too ill to attend school. Their class load is normal curriculum. Also we share a building with another school that has emotionally and behaviorally disturbed students. I plan to pass along those resources that I learn about with them. I was especially moved by Dr. Chandler's discussion of the nature and research suggesting that may was biased towards optimism. In light of some of my peers negative attitudes towards those students I hope to encourage them to look at Dr. Chandler's work.
